EE445S Real-Time Digital Signal Processing Laboratory. Download the course reader , which includes all lecture slides, all handouts, and recent midterm exams. In this course, students derive algorithms from signal processing theory and map the algorithms to embedded software. They learn design flows from application theory to algorithm design to simulation in MATLAB and embedded software implementation in C.

In its final form, our recent paper presents circuits that can treat information as either analog or digital, which stand as the two main pillars for signal processing. First, with our digital, cell-free circuits (i.e., biocomparators) we demonstrated an analog-to-digital converter that can automatically dose bacteria across a wide range of ...
